

Tere! That means “hello” in Estonian. This is one of the many things we learned during the project hosted by our Estonian partner school. We got to know many new things about Estonia, their biodiversity and the Baltic Sea as Estonia borders it. In order to learn many interesting facts, we had two professors visiting the video conference to give a presentation.

But not only the professors made a presentation, students from all countries too. Also, the students of each country worked together on a poster, which was presented later on. The Estonian lesson, in which we learned the basic phrases of the Estonian language, and the interactive quizzes were very interesting and liked by everyone.

On the last day, we also did some cool experiments regarding water and their surface tension. We particularly liked the movement breaks between the lessons. These were used to refresh our mind, so we could concentrate better.

All in all, we really enjoyed these three days, I think everybody can agree with that and we also made a few new friends along the way. We really hope the next time we meet, will be in person. Have a great day!
